

I believe that XM should have the right to broadcast local content as they desire. There is no good reason to block what they are trying to do for local content. XM subscribers pay for a service, and this is their product. It's a private digital medium, and it's subscribed. How does this differ from Satellite TV? The local content stations they are transmitting are not re-broadcasts of out of market area stations.

-Mark